How to free up storage space on Windows 10 PC

In the past few years, the native storage in PCs has gone manifolds. But with it, has also gone the number of photos, videos, songs and other files that we keep in our computers. So, it is not rare to find users facing disk full issues on their PCs. While Apple device users are usually more to face storage-related issues, many Windows PC users too are not immune to the problem. If you fall in that very umbrella of Windows users, here are some options you can try to free up some space on your Windows 10-powered desktop and laptops.

DISK CLEANUP

Disk Cleanup is one of the niftiest tools available in Windows PCs. You can find the option by simply searching for it inside the search bar in the Start Menu. The feature will automatically scan the complete PC and will show you the space used by temporary files, cached files, updates and files that are inside the recycle bin. It is up to you to choose the destinations from where the tool will clean up the files. You can also click the 'Clean up system files' option to remove the older version of Windows. This is likely to get you Gigabytes of space.

UNINSTALL HEAVY APPS

Apps take most of the space in any device, let it be a smartphone or a PC. In Windows 10 you can uninstall the apps that are being used rarely or not at all. You can check out which apps are taking most of the space by navigating through Settings > System > Apps & feature. Simply click on the desired app and tap on 'Uninstall'.

REMOVE DUPLICATE FILES

Only cleaning up disks and uninstalling heavy applications are not enough to solve the issue. You can further free up space by removing duplicate files. For this, you also may require third-party application/applications. One of the popular apps to recognise duplicate files is Ccleaner. After removing duplicate files, images and other content you can further create a backup on one of the cloud storage platforms or multiple cloud storage website and remove the data from the PC, sweeping it clean.

A LEGACY

Cambridge Foundation School leads by Example

Cambridge Foundation School has a rich legacy and history with several milestones during its long more than half a century journey "As an educationist I consider it to be a small but significant role played by the school to help educate the children of women inmates at Tihar jail. From the past three years trained educators are visiting Tihar daily to teach and equip the toddlers at the prison, thus facilitating them to enter the mainstream of life once they have to leave the prison at the age of five. Our initiative to setup a modern educational hub by gifting computers at the prison has been very satisfying. Organizing health camps is a regular feature and forte of Cambridgeans. In its humble effort to provide happier moments to the Jail inmates and their children, sweets etc. along with Tri-cycles and winter clothing are distributed on festivals" says Dr. Anita Puri, Principal.

Dr. Anita Puri

Making better use of technology has been among the goals toward which the school made measurable progress. Many other signs of success cannot be measured by tests, rubrics, or surveys.
